

Preparing a Bible Study for Children

There is a big difference between telling children a Bible story and teaching a Bible lesson. A Bible story is certainly interesting, but a Bible lesson can have a real and lasting impact on a child's life. Making your Bible lesson life changing takes careful preparation. So, you must start your lesson planning early in the week. The following are some tips for preparing a Bible lesson for children.

These examples use the passage from 1 Kings 21:1-29, the narrative of Elijah and Naboth's vineyard.

Study the Word

1. Read the Word. If you are using a curriculum, study your lesson from the Bible, not from the teacher's manual! Read the passage several times using several different versions of the Bible, if possible. Use the curriculum only to get background facts about the culture and the historical setting, etc. as you would any Bible commentary. The teacher's manual can also give you good ideas for games, crafts, and songs, etc.

The first thing you must do is spend time studying the passage for yourself. Look up the cross-references, meditate on the Word. Give the Holy Spirit time to work your lesson for the children right into your own life, too. The children will be more impressed by the relevance of the Word to their own lives if they see that you are learning from the Word right along with them. Ask yourself, "What does God want to teach me?" You cannot teach others something that God has not taught you first.

2. Outline the passage. After you have read the passage several times, list the logical development of the events. What happened first? What happened next, and so forth? Break the text into the main ideas that are presented. Make sure you have the order of events correct.
3. Find the central point of the passage. After finding the main ideas, look for the main theme or general idea of the whole passage. Ask yourself, what is the most important truth that the passage teaches.
4. Chart the passage using your outline. Once you have outlined the text you are ready to break the text apart further by charting it. You use charting to look very carefully at the text through OBSERVATION, INTERPRETATION, and APPLICATION. Take each section of your outline and go through it verse by verse, noting important words, phrases, and ideas.

Follow these steps to chart a passage:

Step 1 - Observation: What does the text say?

While you are reading the text be sure to carefully observe it. What does God's word say, exactly? Look up the meaning of the words, if necessary. Think about why God chose certain words rather than some other words!

In the Observation column make a verse-by-verse list of the outstanding words or phrases that catch your attention. You don't have to re-write every word from the text. As you are doing that, ask yourself "Who is speaking?" "What is the subject?" "Where is it taking place?" "When did it happen?" and so on. As you make your list, do not paraphrase; use the actual words from the passage itself.

Step 2 – Interpretation: What does the passage mean?

In the Interpretation column write the meaning of the words you observed. Look for the general principles and lessons which can be learned from the words or phrases you wrote in the Observation column. This is not your own private interpretation, but the meaning that God intended when He inspired the author to write it down in the first place. Just put it in your own words. As you are doing that, ask yourself, “What is the main idea?” “What is the reason the author wrote this?” “Why did the author choose this word and not another?”

There are several rules for proper interpretation of scripture:

- Interpret literally, unless it is obviously figurative language.
- Study in context; know what was happening before the passage you are studying.
- Let scripture interpret scripture; don’t get your interpretation from some other source.
- New Testament takes precedence; remember the NT is the fulfilment of the OT.

Step 3 – Application: What does the passage mean to me?

In the Application column, write down what you will do today to respond to the lesson God wants you to learn? Ask yourself, “What are the people doing that I should be doing?” “Is there a command that I should obey?” “...a promise that I should claim?” “...a warning that I should heed?” “...an example that I should follow?” Make yourself accountable to God’s word. Make at least one measurable performance objective that focuses on the specific end result. For example, “Today I will...”

Listen for God to communicate to you through His Word. He will speak to you personally; He wants to reveal Himself to you! Remember, don’t rush. It may take you several days of prayerful meditation on a given passage in order to discover meaningful lessons and hear God speaking to you. The objective is to develop your personal relationship with God as you learn to communicate with Him.

5. Develop questions. Once you get the passage outlined and charted you need to develop questions that you can use during your teaching to engage the children, plus you can use them as lesson review questions for a game to reinforce the lesson objectives. It is important to ask questions that will bring about a good working flow through the text.

Make questions from each column in your chart.

Observation Questions: Who? What? When? Where?

Help the children get into the scene themselves and relive the event or conversation. For example:

- Who are the people in this story?
- What did they see, or do, or say?
- What did King Ahab covet?

Interpretation Questions: Why? How?

Help the children think through the main truths of the passage. For example:

- Why would He do that?
- Why didn’t Naboth want to sell King Ahab his vineyard?
- How did Ahab act when Naboth told him he wouldn’t sell his land?

Application Questions:

Help the children think about how they need to respond to God’s word in attitude and behavior. For example:

- Have you ever pouted when you couldn't get your way?
- What happens if you allow your thoughts to continue to desire the things you don't have?
- What are some ways people manipulate others to get their way?

Here is an example chart for the 1 Kings passage:

1 Kings 21:3-4

God's Word	OBSERVATION (What does the text say?)	INTERPRETATION (What does the passage mean?)	APPLICATION (What does the passage mean to me?)
v 2. So Ahab spoke to Naboth, saying, " Give me your vineyard, that I may have it for a vegetable garden, because it is near, next to my house; and for it I will give you a vineyard better than it. Or, if it seems good to you, I will give you its worth in money."	Give me your vineyard that I may have it for a vegetable garden, because it is near, next to my house	Ahab wanted something that wasn't his; something he had no right to. Ahab coveted. God told us in the Ten Commandments it is a sin to covet.	I need to be content with what I have because coveting is a sin.
QUESTIONS:	What was Ahab's proposal to Naboth? (Ahab wanted Naboth to either trade or sell his land.)	Why did Ahab want Naboth's vineyard? (For a vegetable garden because it was conveniently located next to the palace.)	Have you ever wanted something that belonged to someone else? Why is it important to be content with what you have?
v 3. But Naboth said to Ahab, " The LORD forbid that I should give the inheritance of my fathers to you!"	The LORD forbid that I should give the inheritance of my fathers to you.	Naboth refused to give his land to the king. According to the law that God gave Moses and the children of Israel, the land owned by each family was to remain in that family. Naboth had gotten this land from his father and he wanted to pass it on to his own sons. So, Ahab was asking Naboth to do something that was illegal.	Naboth chose to obey God instead of the king, even though it could mean his life. I need to be willing to risk my life or reputation to follow God.
QUESTIONS:	What did Naboth tell Ahab when he asked him to give him his land?	Why did Naboth say, "The LORD forbid that I should give the inheritance of my fathers to you"?	Would you risk your life to obey God's commands?
v 4. So Ahab went into his house sullen and displeased because of the word which Naboth the Jezreelite had spoken to him; for he had said,	So Ahab went into his house sullen and displeased... And he lay down on his bed, and turned away his face, and would eat no food.	Ahab pouted. He couldn't have what he wanted. God wants us to be satisfied with what we have in life.	When I don't get my way, I need to be humble and gracious.

God's Word	OBSERVATION (What does the text say?)	INTERPRETATION (What does the passage mean?)	APPLICATION (What does the passage mean to me?)
"I will not give you the inheritance of my fathers." And he lay down on his bed, and turned away his face, and would eat no food.
QUESTIONS:	What did Ahab do when he couldn't get what he wanted? (He pouted.)	Have you ever acted like Ahab when you couldn't have what you wanted?	How should you act when you can't get your own way?

6. Plan to reach the unsaved child:

- a. Need for a Savior: Look for places in the story where the problem of sin is evident in the lives of the characters in the story. That is, find places in the story that would apply to a child's need for a Savior where you can teach about God's solution to man's problem of sin: the gospel.

For example, you could say, "In verse 4 it says Ahab pouted. He couldn't have what he wanted. Have you ever acted like that when you couldn't have what you wanted? God says that is sin when you act like that. Do you know what God says about sin? The Bible tells us in Ezekiel 18:4 that the soul that sins shall surely die. [When teaching about sin always tell them about the consequences of sin, too.] But Jesus came to take our punishment for sin..."

No matter what the story is about there should be a place to get in the good news. Always use the Bible as your authority. Make sure the children know the Word of God is your source. Make Jesus the hero of every story. He is the answer to every problem we have. You want the unsaved child to learn to trust Jesus as his personal Savior.

- b. Knowledge of God: Look for places in the story where you can teach the children about God's character. He is holy, just, longsuffering, omnipresent, loving.

For example, you could say, "In verse 17 it says that the word of the Lord came to Elijah. God knew all the time exactly what was happening. Nothing is a surprise to Him. God is omnipresent. That means God is everywhere and knows everything that is happening. He knows everything you do, even when you are naughty." You want the children to grow in their understanding of who God is.

7. Plan to reach the saved child: You want the child who has already asked Jesus into his or her life to learn to apply God's Word in everyday circumstances. Find the main thrust of the lesson — the lesson objective or the conclusion to the story which should be summed up in the memory verse for the lesson. It should be something that will challenge the believing child to live more earnestly for God.

For example, "You need to be content with what you have, not greedy like King Ahab was. Here he was the King. He had everything, yet he wanted that vineyard. Our memory verse this week is Hebrews 13:5 'Be content with such things as you have...'"

8. Choose a good Memory Verse for this lesson: The verse should sum up the lesson objective for the lesson. For example, using the 1 Kings passage, your verse might be:

Keep your lives free from the love of money and be content with what you have, because God has said, "Never will I leave you; never will I forsake you." (Hebrews 13:5)

This should emphasize the lesson you want the children to learn; that is, the moral of the story.

9. Prepare an attention-grabbing introduction to the lesson. You can start with a question. For example, you could say: "Have you ever wanted something that belonged to someone else? Did you know when you desire something that someone else has, that's called 'coveting' and God told us in the Ten Commandments that we are not to covet anything that belongs to someone else? Today in our lesson we're going to learn about a king who coveted something that belonged to his neighbor."
10. Plan to capture the emotions of your students: You want the children to live this story. Make the Bible story come alive. For example, "In verse 13 it says they took Naboth outside the city and stoned him to death. How sad, he died and he didn't do anything wrong. Who does that remind you of? God, the Son, the Lord Jesus, died for all the sins of the world and He never, ever sinned. He died for something He didn't do – Jesus died for what you and I did! He took our punishment for sin, the wrong things you and I think, say and do. Jesus didn't have to die for you. And Naboth didn't have to die either, but he was obedient to God and is now in heaven. Have you ever gotten in trouble for something you didn't do?" Let the children talk and share. Let the children act out the scene.

You not only want the children to know the facts, but to feel the emotions. If these stories are real to them, the outcome is that they will learn to make right choices in their own lives.

11. Prepare your Visual Aids and Activities.

Having colorful visual aids is very helpful in capturing the attention of children. Be sure they are in the right order and that using them doesn't become a distraction to you. Pull them out of your Bible to reinforce the fact that the lesson is coming out of Scripture. Then, think of songs, crafts, games, and object lessons that will help reinforce your lesson objectives.

12. Don't Forget the Invitation.

Once you have told your story and your students have clearly heard the message of salvation, don't stop there! Be sure to give them an invitation to accept Jesus as their personal Savior. You've made their need known, the problem is clear; now offer them the solution, Jesus Christ. Use a condition/promise verse to give the invitation. For example, you could end your lesson by saying, Acts 16:31 says, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and you will be saved." God punishes sin, but you can be saved if you will just believe on the Lord Jesus. If anyone wants to receive Jesus, just have them raise their hand to identify themselves and you can pray with them after class.

Your Bible lesson should be life changing, so don't leave out the sweetness of Jesus.

Lesson Presentation Tips

Once you have studied the passage for yourself and you believe that the lesson is valuable for the children, the Holy Spirit will anoint you to teach it to the children.

When you teach the lesson, teach it accurately and with creativity. Be enthusiastic. Tell the story with as much fervor, excitement, and belief as you can, and let the Holy Spirit do His job. Make sure the children know the Word of God is your source.

Don't get too caught up in trying to cover everything you've got planned. Remember that your goal is not to cover your agenda, but to get the living Word of God into the children's hearts so that the Holy Spirit can create change in their lives. So, leave your teacher's manual at home and while you are teaching, hold your Bible with reverence.

Be Accurate

We are responsible to teach truth – interestingly – but accurately. You can project feelings, but don't fabricate or add inaccuracies to make it more interesting. Kids love fantasy, but the Bible is not fantasy; the Word of God is the truth.

Do's and Don'ts

The following are some Do's and Don'ts for presenting your lesson:

Presentation:

- Make eye contact with the children. Don't look at your notes.
- Organize your visual aids. Pull them out of your Bible; it reinforces the fact that the lesson is coming out of Scripture. But be sure they're in the correct order!
- Make sure the children can easily see the visual aids.
- Be sure your appearance (jewelry, glasses, etc.) isn't a distraction.
- Be confident.
- Use your voice, facial expressions, and physical gestures to be expressive. Pauses are very powerful, too. Use your personality. Have a variety of pitches to use for people in the story. Shout, talk slow or fast, make your voice march.
- Create visual or mental images. Word pictures are very effective.
- Make your words clear. For example say, "Balm" of Gilead, not "bomb."
- Don't talk "Christianese;" look up definitions of terms. Use the appropriate vocabulary for your students so they can understand what you are teaching them.
- Don't tell the story too quickly. Slowing down can make a great emphasis.

Introduction:

- Set the mood, or atmosphere, for the lesson.
- Start with an attention grabber or object lesson to make the story relevant to the kids. Make the story live from the first line. Get into action.
- Bring the author to life – tell something about who he was.
- Get the kids excited about your teaching the lesson; make them look forward to it.

The Body:

- Get the facts straight, but don't worry if you leave something out. Just don't put anything in that is not in the story.
- Be expressive. Try to put yourself in the place of the Bible characters. Make them real (hungry, tired, etc.) to the children.
- Be descriptive. Try to get a real sense of what actually happened. Be enthusiastic – if you are not, the children won't be either!
- Act out the different characters. Do a dialog using different voices for each person in the story.
- Involve some of the other senses. For example, if you are teaching about Palm Sunday, bring in some palm branches to wave around.
- Be sensitive to the children's emotional level. If there is a morally sensitive issue in the text, ask yourself if the children will come to know the Lord Jesus better by including it. For example, if you are teaching very young children, you do not need to mention that someone was killed for being disobedient. You can tell them he was punished. Ask them what sorts of punishments they receive when they are naughty. Remember young children are very literal and are not able to think in abstract concepts. Make the lesson applicable to their lives.

- It is said that the attention span of a child is one minute per year of age. Keep your lessons short and to the point; the tighter the better.
- Don't start a story if you don't have time to do it justice.
- Don't be unnerved by irrelevant questions during the story – particularly from very young children.

Application:

- Weave personal application right into your lesson; don't wait until the end. You can suspend the story to ask a personal application question, then go on to find out how the Bible character handled the situation.
